Foreword

We, the several editors of the Kaleidoscope, have united in a true effort to present to the school a reflection of this, our last year at G. P. S. As one particular era of our lives coalesces with another, we wish to preserve for ourselves and others a realistic cross-view of our small corner of the world. We have attempted to create an atmosphere similar to that of actuality, a time and philosophy significant to us at G. P. S., a personal touch, and most important, lest we forget the true purpose here, our ideals . . . .

Devotion

Companionship

Wisdom

Honor

Her greatest gift to her students—herself.

Dedication

Casually clad, seemingly disorganized, with a craze for pizza, Montavani, Michael Shayne, and a certain Buick Skylark, Miss Moore is decidedly human. Daily, she reveals her open sincerity and youthful disposition. As an advisor for both the "Static" and the Student Council, she has, in her years here, led others to lead. In the classroom, she has taught more than the facts of English literature; she has shared her appreciation for universal literature.

We remember the inscrutable penmanship, the interpretive illustrations, the quaint expressions. We remember the natural composure and the devilish eyes. We, the class of '64, remember and dedicate this annual, Miss Moore, to you.

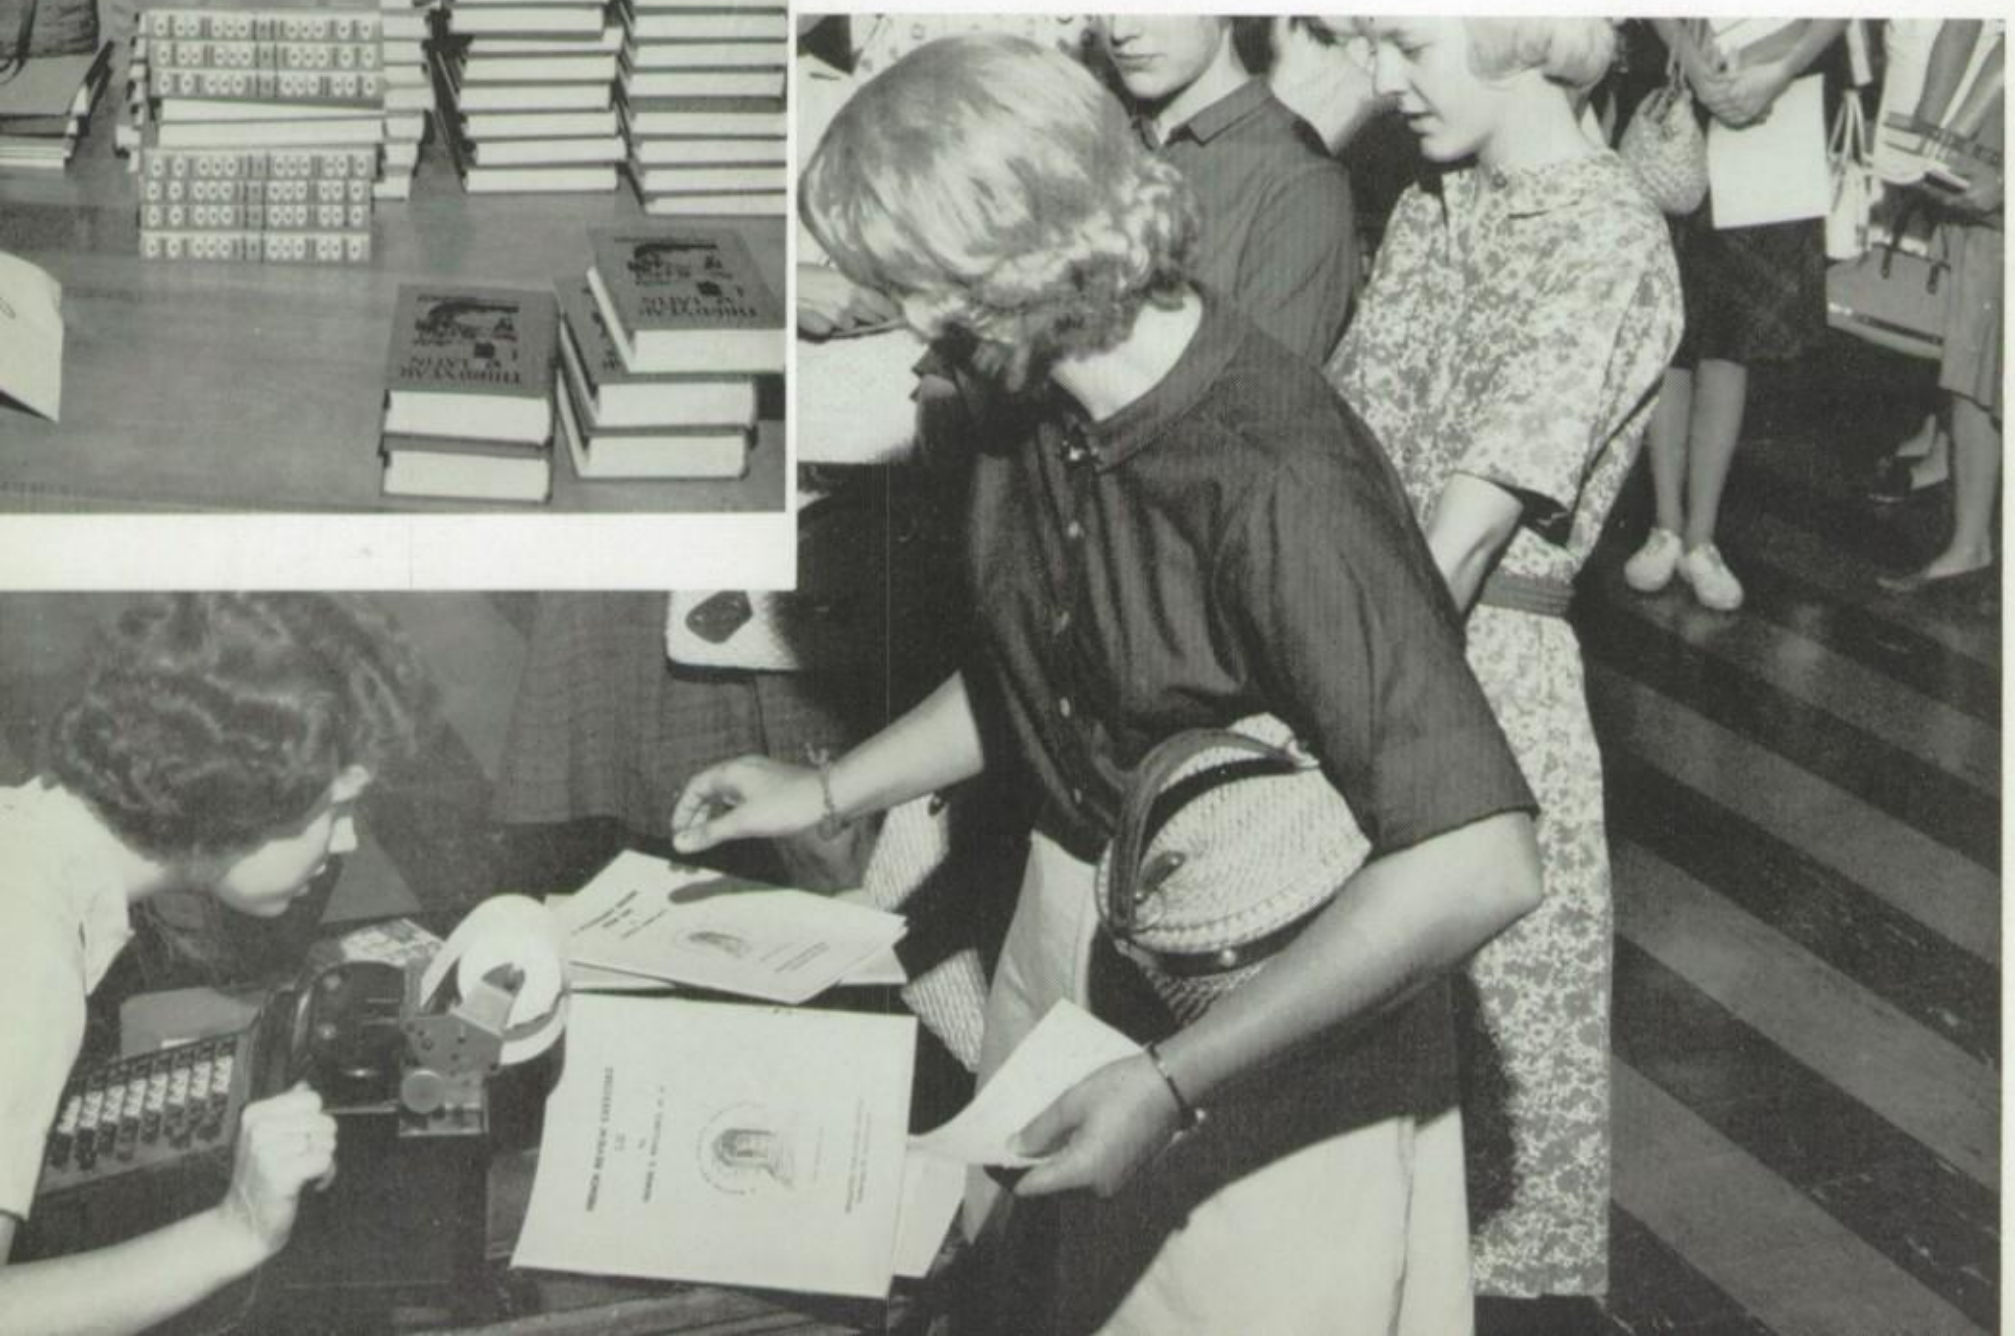
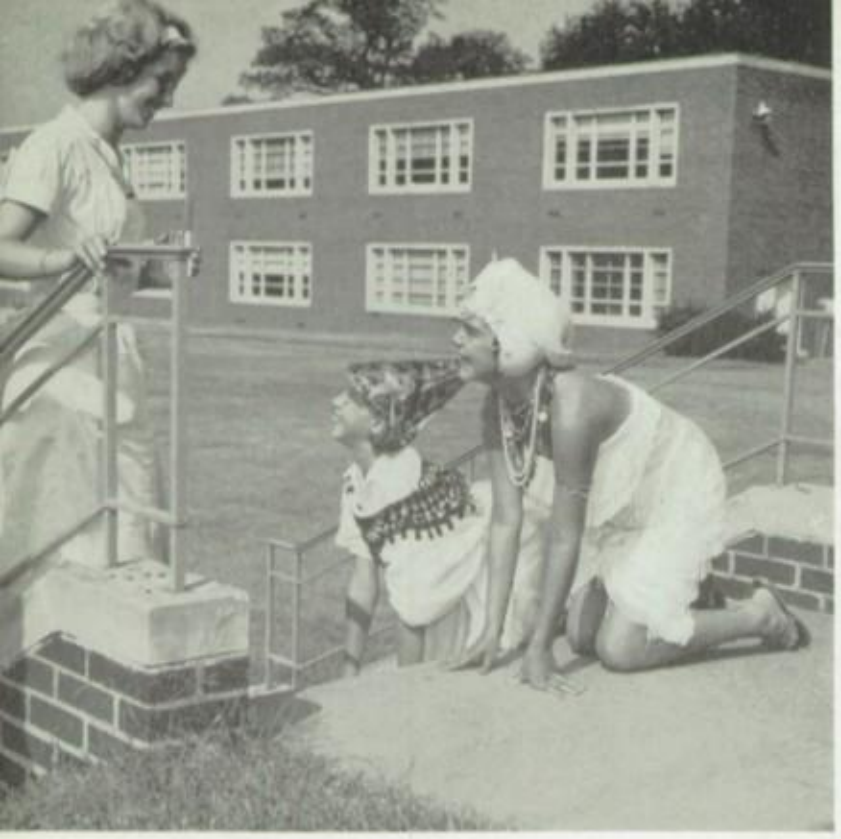
REGISTRATION—Greetings echo through the bustling halls as students meet friends whom Summer has scattered. While mothers attack with a sally of questions and prod their daughters forward from behind the lines, frantic Annual Board members wage economic war with dollars and sense. Class advisors extend their yearly welcome; teachers give the initial homework assignments whose "echoes roll . . . and grow forever and forever."



Swarming off the bus . . . . . .

Daily arrivals are always the same, yet infinitely different.

Students scale the path-worn banks up to the sidewalks into school.



RAT WEEK—History lives again . . . blindfolded beauticians . . . three-legged race . . . 8-hour commercial on channel G.P.S. . . scraped noses from pencil races . . . constant bowing to senior cats . . . car wash with Q-tips . . . free lunch and a small gift . . . All in fun, these highlights initiated the incoming students into the spirit of school life.

Eleanor McCallie congratulates "worst skater" Helen Burns, while seventh grade experts offer support.

Big Wheels roll . . .
little wheels spin.

The storm . . .

HOMEROOM—That period every morning when ten minutes of announcements are crammed into two. In this brief time, official duties — student elections and uniform inspections—are carried out. The bell rings, and students shuffle on to chapel.

before the calm.

Chapel begins . . . with a hymn and a prayer . . .

. . . maybe a Senior chapel talk.

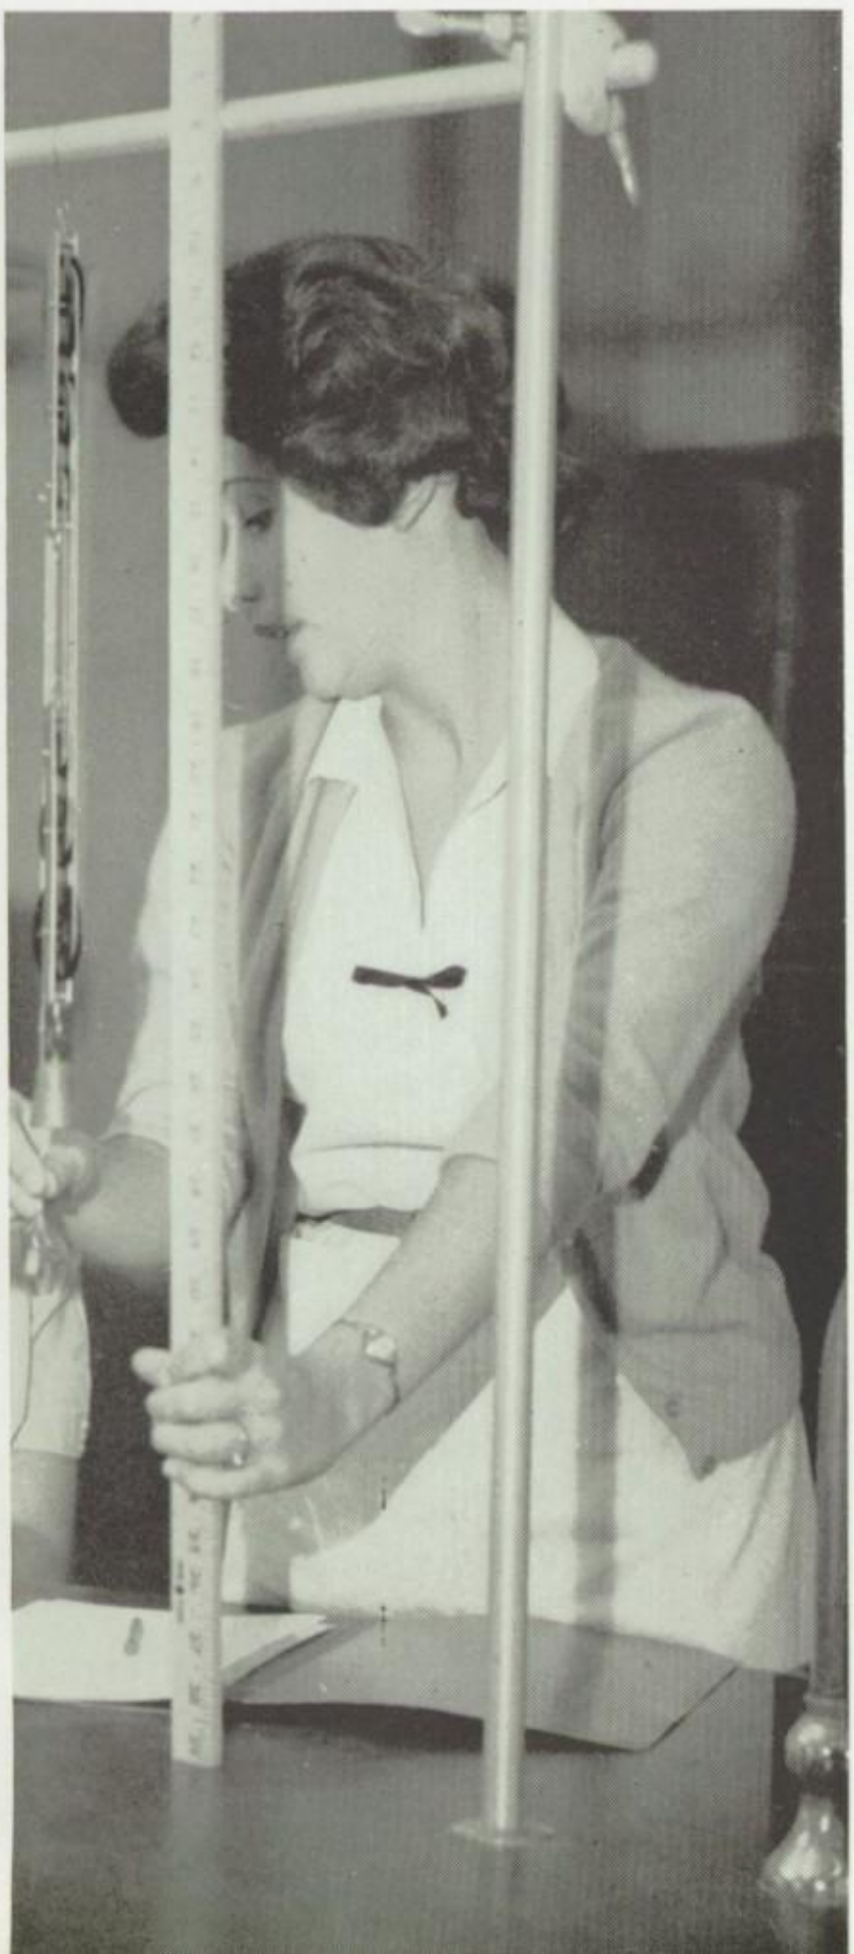
When it is over . . .
there are congratulations . . .

And a new day starts.

The concentration of study . . .

CLASSES—A bell rings. As the rustling of papers and shuffling of books dies down, class begins. Experiments, explanations, recitations and tests manifest the opportunities and responsibilites of knowledge, the boundless limit of which is recognized by the individual's initiative.

versus the monotony of sitting still.



Another bell, and the masses converge from the rooms into the hall and from the halls into other rooms, pausing only for a minute as a girl hastily scoops up her scattered books.

Senior slump—at least three term papers due the same day.

1, 2, 3, 4,
It's about these warm-up exercises . . .

2, 2, 3, 4,
I'm going to be sore tomorrow . . .

3, 2, 3, 4,
Why don't we play soccer instead . . .

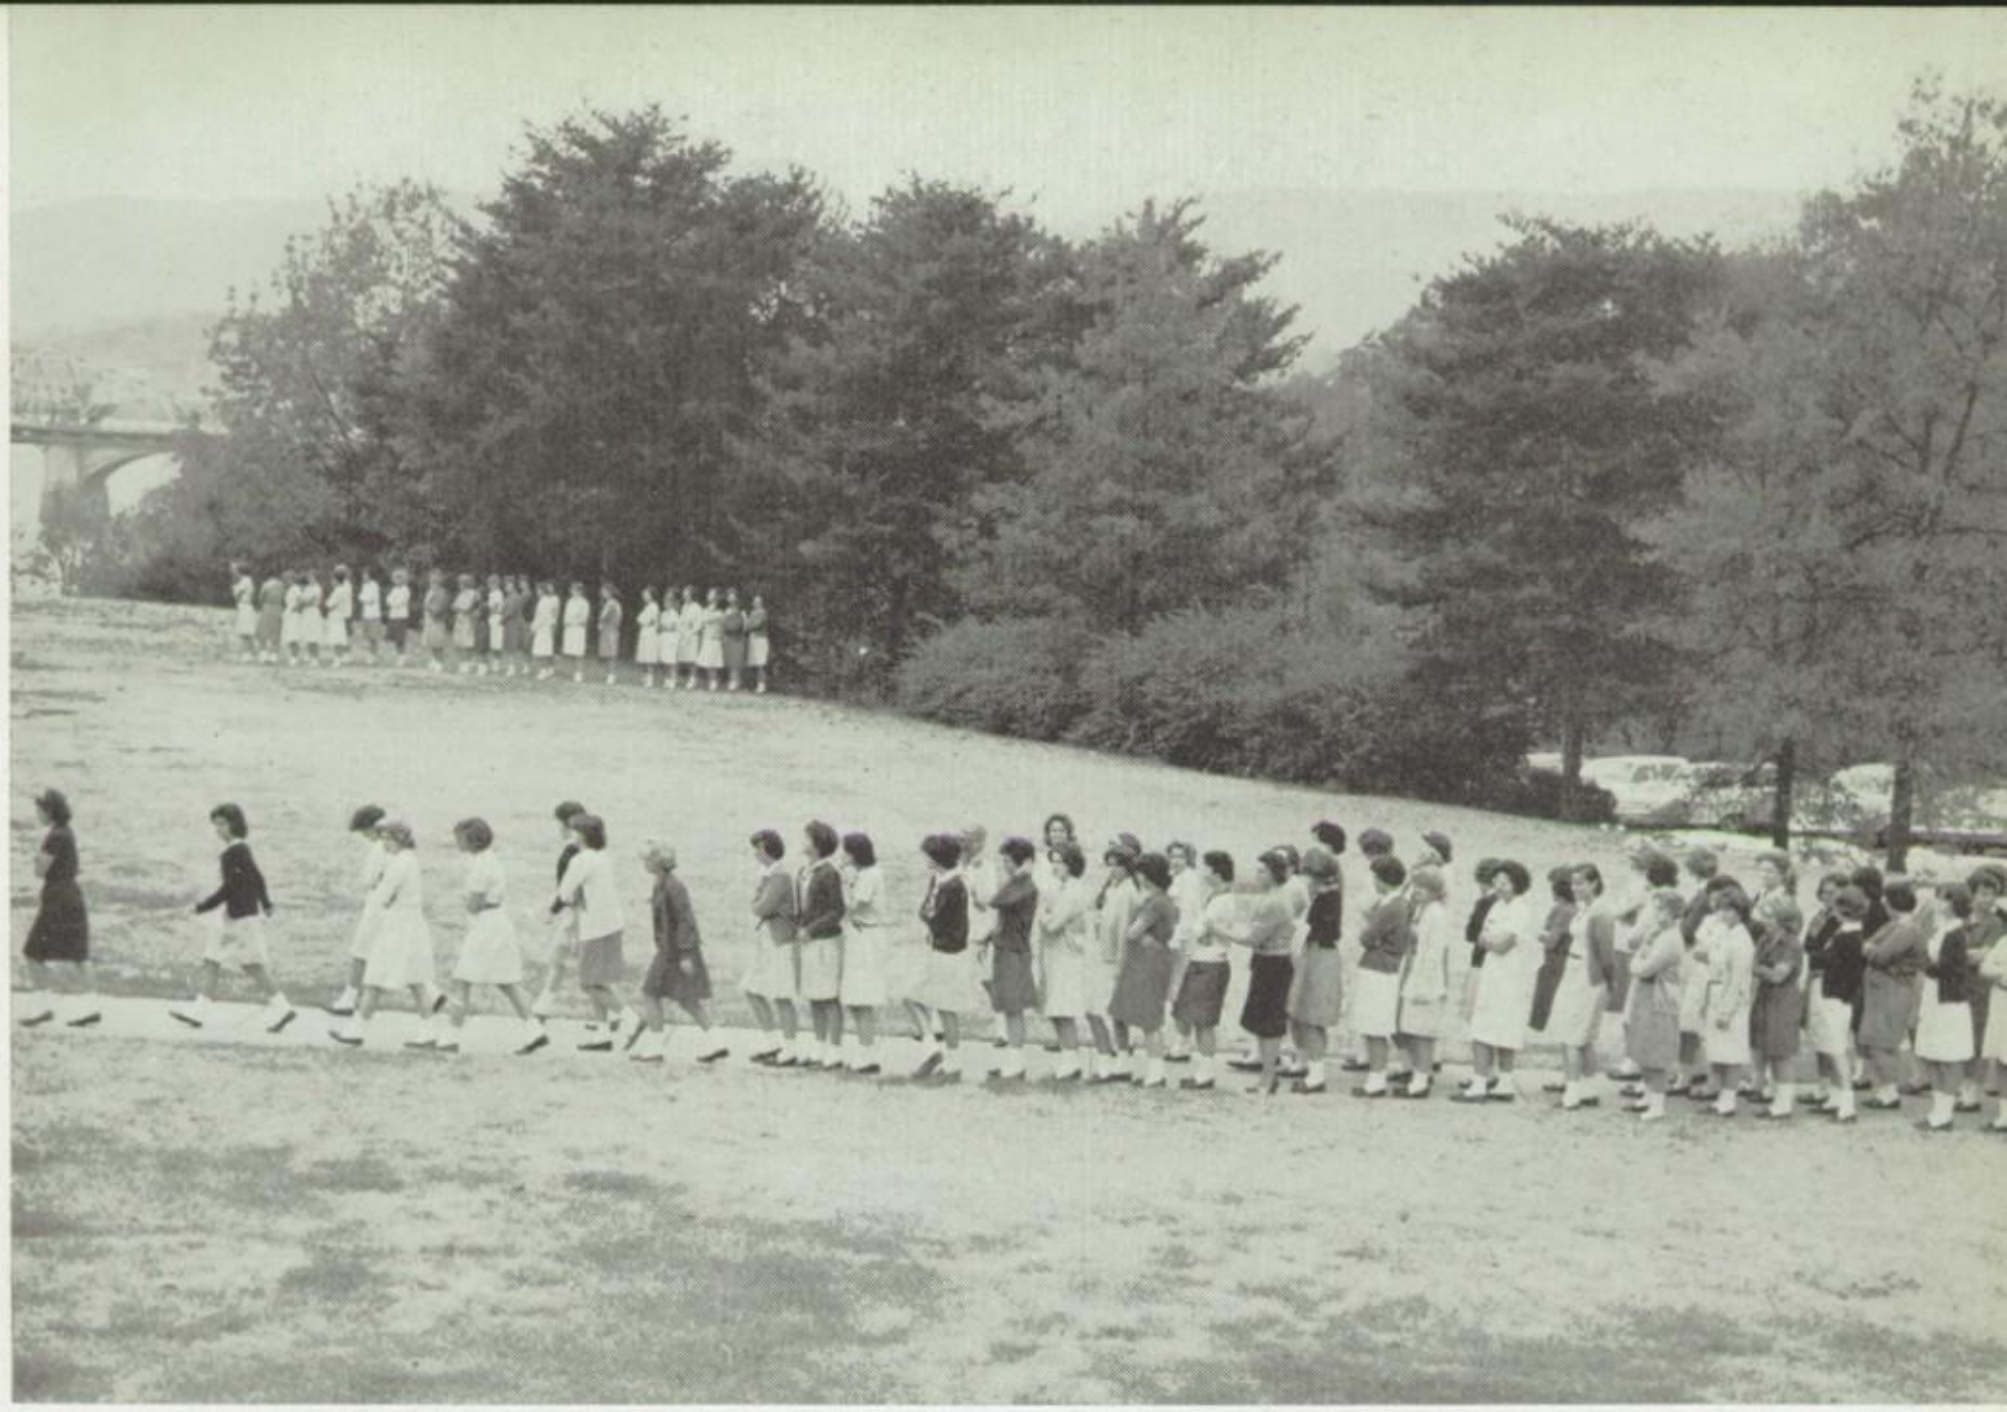
4, 2, 3, 4,
Basketball, tennis, first-aid, anything . . .

5, 2, 3, 4,
I could say I had a bad cold . . .

6, 2, 3, 4,
4.3 more minutes until the five minute bell rings . . .

7, 2, 3, 4,
Then only ten more laps around the gym and I can get dressed . . .

8, 2, 3, 4,
Ready, Halt!



FIRE DRILL—The Volunteer Brigade of Faculty Firemen assist Firechief Moyer in training students for emergency exits. As the alarm penetrates the customary calm of study, startled students respond by hastening from their desks for two minutes of fresh air. Students and faculty are called back to the routine of learning by the "clanging and the clashing of the bells."

CAFETERIA—"Remind me to get a lunch ticket tomorrow." . . . "Did y'all have a chemistry test?" . . . "Did we change tables?" . . . ping pong match . . . "Are you goin' to wear a long formal Friday?" . . . "Quick. Miss Moyer's checking tables." . . . "Did you see Dr. Kildare last night?" . . . National Honor Society meeting . . . "Does anybody have a dime I can borrow?" . . . "What did Hannibal say when he saw the elephants coming?" . . . "I'll take your tray back, and yours, and yours, hey waitaminute." . . . shuffleboard tournament . . . "Excusez-moi, Roger. Je dois uhhh." . . . "Will you get me some cheese crackers?" . . . decorating committee meeting . . . "I've got to go to 115." . . . "Who's monitor?"

Organizations

Student Council

Representatives to the student government serve the school in a vital and serious capacity. Encouraging honor and self-discipline, they share their convictions with the student body. While holding the welfare of the student body foremost in their minds, representatives consider school policy and individual problems. Under the quiet, yet forceful leadership of Jane Wyatt, the student government capably directs student affairs.

National Honor Society

The Duffy-Jarnigan Chapter of the National Honor Society, named for the founder of the school, is an honorary organization to recognize those who have outstanding qualities of leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Each member of the organization must be chosen by unanimous vote of the faculty. In addition to sponsoring the two initiations during the year, members send letters at the end of each semester to students who have excelled in academic achievement. On class day, they present the Freshman Cup to the Freshman student who most nearly approaches the ideals of the society.

Terpsichord

Terpsichord, the varsity club of modern dance, holds opportunity for a girl with talent and desire to express herself in a dance medium. The members of Terpsichord combine dancing skill, imagination, and dedicated practice to present an annual program to the school. Their interpretive dancing reflects comic, primitive, and graceful moods, in turn.

As May Day nears, club members are put in charge of various dances which they create and teach to the students. It is in this capacity that Terpsichord takes on the characteristics of a service club.

Senior Christian Youth Club

Freshmen and Sophomore members of the Christian Youth Club have met this year in a spirit of Christian fellowship, which demands the participation of each individual. Bible quizzes, hymn sings, and Bible charades are a few examples of the ways in which the group share knowledge and companionship. Outside speakers offer the group a chance to realize the application of spiritual truths in daily life. The members recognize and accept the opportunity to be of service to their fellowman by adopting the project of helping a needy family. This club provides its members with the chance to serve others, while learning to understand each other's beliefs through worship together.

Christian Forum

Packing the trunk with goodies for the Bagget's Thanksgiving.

The Juniors and Seniors of Christian Forum this year have purposed to realize growth in thought and dedication in action. Hilda Gaston, President for 1963-64, has shared her vitality with the group and has promoted action through her concern. She has initiated beginning the meeting with a prayer, closing with the Mizpah Benediction, and continuing the spirit of meetings by presenting to the girls an inspirational epigram each week. Christian Forum gives each girl a chance to express intelligently her religious views and to grow in her own faith.

Surprising—the articulations of mathematics!

Three plus two does not equal two plus three according to modern mathematics. The members of the Math Club are spending their time this year learning how to count in the different languages of mathematics. David Glenn sings

The Music Club's small but active membership have shared their enjoyment of music this year with the student body by sponsoring the Baylor and McCallie Glee Clubs and an hour-long performance by banjo-picker Dr. Nat Winston. At weekly meetings, club members listen to such recordings as those of Peter, Paul and Mary, the Smothers Brothers, and the Norman Luboff Choir. As a special service to the Junior Symphony Guild, the girls usher at concerts during the year.

Current Events Club

A view of the Hunter Art Gallery Christmas display

The Current Events Club began their programs for 1963-64 with talks by John Popham of "The Chattanooga Times" and Kinchen Exum of the "Chattanooga News-Free Press." Other activities have included a tour of a newspaper publishing plant, a visit to the Customs Office, a trip to the Chattanooga Medicine Company, and the International Christmas show at Hunter Art Gallery. With a fresh interest and understanding of the community, students assume more easily the responsibility of citizenship.

Junior Theater Arts

With practice on tape recorders, students improve speech.

Learning to re-create the miniature world of the theater is a prime objective of the Theater Arts Club. Members witness amateur and professional performances presented by local and out-of-town groups. Club activities by the students also include extemporaneous and prepared performances. Childhood games are converted into training devices as members communicate through pantomime.

The club is divided into two sections. The Junior Theater Arts with members from the ninth and tenth grades provides a training ground for the more serious work of the Senior Theater Arts, composed of Juniors and Seniors. With an increased appreciation for drama, girls are better able to enjoy the art of the stage.

Junior Art Workshop

Under the guidance of Miss Myers . . .

The Junior Art Workshop is made up of girls from the seventh grade class. It is a service organization that prepares girls for Senior Art Workshop. They help the school in many ways such as—painting, cleaning, caring for equipment, and making May Day props.

Senior Art Workshop

props for May Day . . .

The Art workshop is a service club that creates props for plays, school functions, and May Day. Members have worked with paint and brushes to produce colorful, useful, and attractive background designs which characterize the different decades of G.P.S.'s fiftieth May Day.

The club is made up of junior and senior girls. Sponsored by Miss Myers, the head of the art department, the group has been offered opportunities for service through creativity.

Spanish Club

Eagerly they sing, under the leadership of Charlotte . . .

or Senora.

Spanish students who wish to be able to apply Spanish in everyday usage devote time after school to accomplish this objective. By singing songs and playing Spanish games, they learn with laughter as well as effort. Mrs. Solana, the club sponsor, lends her time to encourage these students, helping them to acquire a greater knowledge of the language they are studying.

Publications

Static

Mabry gives out last-minute assignments.

The aim of the Static staff is to publish an interesting paper on school events. To please the students, to avoid censorship, to get to the press on time, to win a superior rating, and to make each issue better than the one before combine to complicate the goal of the Static. "Roving Reporter," "Garlic and Gardenias," and letters to the editor reflect student opinion. The Static presents tributes to outstanding students in two columns, "Athlete of the Month" and "Girl of the Month." The tedious week before press, when staff members type last-minute articles and plan the format of the paper, precedes the glorious week of publication when students and faculty receive the paper and extend their hearty approval.

That paper doll you cut out YESTERDAY was the best one yet

We, the members of the annual staff, assured that everyone knows the purpose of the annual board (to put out the school year book and sell supplies), wish to use this space to devote a few words to our somewhat unsung sponsor, Mrs. Clark. We are truly appreciative of her patience, her willingness to forge ahead with us on new paths, and her ability to laugh with us at our many small fiascos. With these things in mind, we salute the Queen of 115.

All right . . . I'll tell you once more and THEN . . .

Some day my prince will come.

Only three more years and I can retire.

Did I say $2.61 or $2.65?
Maybe we'd better start over—1, 2, 3 . . .

Odds are 3 to 1 we'll have to write it over again anyway.

Athletics

Athletic Association

Captains record points . . .

after intramural games.

The Athletic Association is composed of elected team captains from each grade. These representatives work to stimulate participation in various tournaments and to organize Black and Blue intramural competition. They also have the responsibility of accurately recording the points of each student as she works toward an intramural letter. At the end of the year, the Athletic Cup is awarded to the team with the highest accumulation of points.

Cheerleaders

This year's cheerleaders deserve special commendation for their contagious school spirit. Their active support at every sports event cheers both students and players. New uniforms, new cheers, and renewed vigor bring new faces to the stands.

Class History

During the Stone Age, we, as early cave dwellers inhabiting the lower regions under the gym, banded together out of ignorance and fear against the dread, mighty seniors, who were stronger than we were. Soon the seniors ceased to worry us and new fears overtook us. Led by Laura Lee, Rosa, and Mary, we stumbled upon the fire of learning one day, which scared us at first, but which turned out to help us in many ways, especially when the formidable semester tests swooped down upon us. Eleanor and Anne W. represented us on the tribal governing council, which encouraged us not to walk over the dangerous Market Street bridge in uniform.

We advanced in many ways in this age. Some of our group learned to draw pictures on the walls of Miss Myers' art class, while others began to grasp the fundamentals of speaking in a foreign tongue—French. One of our mentors, Mrs. Armstrong, taught us to march in line as civilized people to the cave where our food was kept. Meanwhile, Mrs. Stanford taught us to use weapons—basketballs, kickballs, and volleyballs—against opposing peoples. Mrs. Wheeler told us wonderful stories about the rocks, the trees, and the animals on the earth, while Mrs. Crittenden and Mrs. Browder delighted us with tales of strange gods and heroes.

In May we celebrated Spring Rites with Anna, Barbara J., Carolyn P., Dani, and Kit acting as special attendants to the queen. We were then beginning to reach a new height of civilization as we turned to the glory that was the eighth grade.

SEVENTH GRADE—Avanelle Armstrong, Ginger Baer, Jerry Bailey, Bernice Baker, Ann Baldwin, Suzanne Beckmann, Kitty Bieter, Ruth Black, Peggy Blevins, Carolyn Bostick, Susan Bridgers, Brenda Brown, Barbara Browne, Helen Burns, Beth Carter, Carolyn Cissna, Beth Davis, Judy Demos, Kristin Dollinger, Catherine Duff, Danielle Dunkerley, Pat Franklin, Hilda Gaston, Betty Gay, Marsha Goree, Catherine Groves, Mary Jo Hixon, Kay Hocker, Lynn Hodge, Kitty Hon, Alice Huskey, Barbara Johnson, Julie Johnson, Evelyn Kennedy, Kitty Kirby, Elizabeth Landry, Hildred Levi, Judy McCall, Mary McCall, Eleanor McCallie, Ann McCullough, Jane McFadden, Michelle Maroney, Kit Martin, Beth Milligan, Joan Morton, Cherie Muerth, Fain Murphey, Pat Nelson, Louise Newell, Carolyn Poynton, Anna Reynolds, Ann Robinson, Susan Robinson, Joan Salyer, Susan Sawrie, Charlotte Smith, Harriet Smith, Virginia Smith, Carol Spicer, Rosa Tagle, Linda Talley, Barbara Taylor, Jean Taylor, Patti Tessmann, Roz Ulin, Helen Walker, Mimi Warner, Anne Williams, Jane Wyatt, Susan Yates.

Sing, O Muse, of the glorious deeds of grade eight. Sing of the envy of the gods for our air-conditioned temple to Athena, the blood of the seventh grade barbarians vanquished in Field Day, and the confusion of a Spring Vacation, held during an ice storm. Sing of the laurels and purple of our leaders, Suzi, Evelyn, and Linda Ta. Sing of the doves and olive branches of Jane and Patti, our representatives to the Student Council, and the staff and shield of Helen W. for Welfare. Sing of the first science fair and of the two-hundred card tables, five hundred gallons of paint, millions of sea shells, ants, small animals and headaches which went into our works, and the small gold cup which Susan Yates won.

Swift we were as we ran errands for the office under the provisional membership in the Service League. How sweetly we sang our definition of the epic to the tune of "Trochee trips from long to short . . ." which we plunked on our lyres. Much we questioned truth in the pursuit of mathematics, and committed to heart the tactics of Odysseus the Crafty. We tirelessly conjugated verbs in Latin, ceaselessly pondered the ways of gods and men in history, and adventitiously perambulated in music. To cap our pursuit of wisdom—Harriet, Helen W., Mary, Jean, Brenda, Joan S., Lynn, Roz, and B. J. played out a study of the fates entitled "Judy Takes Over," which was received with wild acclaim.

Before the decline and fall of our eighth grade empire, we staged a chorale in celebration May. Costumed as kings, queens, cards, musicians, blackbirds, and courtiers, we danced and sang, almost in unison. Indeed we captured a last moment of glory before the dark.

The ninth grade year—ah, bitter chill it was when we entered it. Perhaps it was always thus but the Dark Ages must be lived through to be appreciated. We were the despair of everyone connected with us; it was oft remarked that where respect for learning moulders, the people sicken and die. Although Eleanor, Hilda, Roz and Rosa Tagle tried valiantly to save our erring band from intellectual serfdom, the project practically died a-borning.

Of course, life wasn't all bad. As the sun brings daylight even to a clouded atmosphere, so Fain and Mary attempted to illuminate as much of the age-old principles as they could for us. Lynn worked as hard as St. Joan in Welfare; and the members of the Library Club, while writing little themselves, helped to organize the knowledge which persons older and wiser than they had left for their enlightenment. With the principle of ever reaching for Heaven, the Freshmen Team competed in real athletics; the class as a whole, in Ivanhoe doll dressing and castle-construction; and a few, in Friday-Study Hall sitting. In spite of the degeneration of the Latin language and the study of history, the drama grew in stature as Helen W. and Ann M. prepared to dissect Ginger in "The Pampered Darling" (an early morality play), with Susan R., Anna, Janie, Kris Dollinger, Laura Lee, Evelyn, Lynn and Kris P. looking on. We also made a short exploration to Nashville, where we discovered that the field next to the Parthenon was swarming with boys. So much for culture!

We celebrated our inauspicious entrance into the modern world by a dance whose theme was Bali-Hai, this being a reference to a poem by an obscure Roman y-clept Gaius Maximum Escapius. As the year drew slowly (very slowly) to a close, we presented what we had just learned to call an interlude to our May Day audience. Some of us were beaming sun-rays and others, less beaming, were trees. But we have the theme of that May Day to ourselves as a consolation—"Oh Wind, if Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?"

Scarce had we, wisely foolish, begun the tenth grade when we were universally recognized to have reached our flower, our bloom, our greenness, our Renaissance. The vitality of youth was upon us and the tree of life before us to be shaken as a fruit tree. Led by our President, Carolyn C., her second, Marsha, the record-keeper Roz, and the money-changer Beth M., we made war and peace among ourselves with the outer world, stopping only to let Evelyn care for the wounded in Welfare and Patti and Lynn lead our attempts at Service. Some of our mentors were scarcely more experienced than we—say, for example, Miss Porzelius and Miss Smith. From among our members, we chose Linda Ta., and Hilda as envoys to the Student Council, and let Evelyn, Roz, Mary, Fain and Laura Lee write the deathless poetry of the Static. Meanwhile Linda Th., Anne W., Fain, Helen W., Harriet, Sammye, Ann B., and Evelyn spoke the resonant lines of the "Witch Hazel Stick," our class play. Alas, that it should be our last performance on the GPS stage! We speak our lines and are gone . . .

As the hours crept toward the inevitable semesters, we felt a new spirit arise among us. The exuberance, the fury and color of youth, we felt, concealed our defects and allowed them to fester. We needed a Reformation to cure ourselves. With minds ever more bent to perfection, reform we did. So much so, in fact, that we were models of decorum at the Freshman-Sophomore Dance. Although we burned our budgets behind us, our propriety froze the walls into a Winter Wonderland. We felt it was a shame that the snow could not be transported to Gatlinburg, because for once we restrained ourselves on a class trip.

On May Day we looked seriously at the ancients and wound up by dancing about the Maypoles. This done, we ended the year successfully. Most of us felt that we could divest ourselves of the guidance of the Greeks and Romans and choose for ourselves what we wished to study and think and do. We closed the door behind us and stepped into a new age.

We were Reason personified in the eleventh grade. Entering with grace and behaving with manners, we knew that the world was in our hands and that we could do whatever we wished as long as we reasoned. In the spirit of perfect fairness, we chose Patti, Cheryl, Linda Ta., and Anne W. to be our leaders and allowed Ann B. to care for the masses in Welfare. We carried out a new experiment in democracy by electing three Student Council representatives instead of two, these being Fain, Mary, and Jane W. In addition, many of our most outstanding became members of the National Honor Society, which were happy to let them do in spite of our feelings for equality of men (Barbara A., Laura Lee, Ann B., Lynn, Mary, Eleanor, Ann M., Fain, Patti, Roz and Jane). Others instilled with this same feeling preached the enlightenment of the masses and freedom of the press (the Static) and were saved from the wrath of the administration only by Laura Lee's sharp blue pencil. Guided by the righteous spirit of those who are saving the world, they challenged their arch-enemy, the Annual Board, to a basketball game. Unfortunately the first Antic Bowl was not to be won by the Static.

As time went on and no disasters seemed forthcoming, we felt that some sort of celebration was in order. To this end we rented a jukebox and danced in solitary splendor in the study hall. Later on we shared the Junior-Senior Prom; we had liked independence but we were too exhausted to assume the responsibility. Confusion was being engendered for us, by us, and around us. For May Day we had studied dueling, but until the last moment it seemed that we might not be able even to mumble "En garde." Then, of course, there were college boards to remind us that perhaps we were not so brilliant as we had thought. This was depressing, although we seemed to be able to bear up.

The Modern Age saw the growth of sixty-seven allied powers as they struggled toward eventual independence from the mother country. Winners of the 1964 elections were Eleanor, Marsha, Suzi, and Patti, while Jane as chief justice with Roz, Mary, and Laura Lee were in charge of judicial matters. Dede and Linda Ta. headed the department for social work. After having observed the state of the Senior Inner Tube Corps in the GPS Olympic Swim Meet, rival sports leaders Helen W. (Black) and Beth M. (Blue) urged an overall campaign for physical fitness. Needless to say, Cheryl and Anna cheered them on with wild enthusiasm.

No sooner had we tasted of the luxury, prosperity, and merriment of the Junior-Senior Harvest than we hit the Great Depression of 1963-64. Semester exams, term papers, and the prospect of emerging into college threatened our security and peace of mind. Somehow, after innumerable conferences in the library and treaties with the colleges, we managed to disarm our worry. Appointed to Who's Who were Linda Th., Carolyn C., Sammye, and Helen W., while Young Women of the Year were Eleanor, Most Active; Ann M., Most Likely to Succeed; Marsha, Most Popular; Beth M., Most Versatile; Ann R., Most Congenial; Linda T., Most Sincere; Helen B., Wittiest; Cheryl, Cutest; Dani D., Most Feminine, and Judy D., Most Vivacious.

After the pleasure trips of Spring Vacation, we made a business trip to Oak Ridge to observe the progress of the Atomic Energy Commission. Then Barbara and Mary reigned at May Day, which also happened to be the fiftieth anniversary of the celebration. The seniors never looked better as they watched the dances which the lower classmen gave. Ye Olde Archives Society presented us with a portfolio of our history and development, prepared under the direction of Lynn and Kit with Alice, Susan B., Ann R., Sammye, Cherie, Fain, Ginger, Helen B., Judy M., Ann B., Jean, Anne W. and Carolyn C. assisting. After a final round of parties, exams and banquets, Chief Executive Tucker okayed the independence of us sixty-seven small states. We were finally able to stand on our own two feet. However, we shall always keep close ties with the school that has helped us gain our maturity.

—By Kris Palmquist and Laura Lee Balch

Class Will

I, Carole Anderson, will all my misplaced homework papers to whoever can find them in time to use them.

We, Avanelle Armstrong and Michelle Maroney, will our ability to have a flat tire on the way to Sewanee to anyone who is stupid enough to have a desire for unrequited love.

I, Barbara Atwater, will my athletic prowess to Charlene Cook and Cindy Kemp, who so seriously lack this ability.

I, Virginia Lea Baer, who am insecure, frustrated, maladjusted, nervous, and ill at ease, will all of these traits to my sister Cathy, who is trying so desperately to graduate, for the "hurrieder she goes the behinder she gets."

We, Jerry Bailey and Anne Williams, will our spots back to the leopard.

We, Laura Lee Balch, Ann McCullough, and Kris Palmquist, will our ability to stick our feet in our mouths to Barry Goldwater, who seems to be having the same trouble.

I, Ann Baldwin, will every nickname I ever acquired—George, Claude, Eurasia, Baldy, etc.—to any girl whose friends never give her any. I'm sure to get plenty more at college.

I, Pat Barnwell, will my driving ability to GPS in the hope that someday it will give a driving course for such drivers as I.

I, Suzi Beckmann, will wish people would learn to spell my name correctly.

I, Susan Bridgers, will all my extra height to my little sister Peggy, who needs something. She's so short.

I, Sammye Burnette, will my spontaneous giggles, radiant smile, and effervescent personality to Jessica Hobbs. Poor little introvert, she never seems to have any fun.

I, Helen Burns, will my wit to Mary Alice, who is the only real Witt at GPS.

I, Beth Carter, will my purple leotard and black tights to anyone who has the intestinal fortitude to wear the colors together.

I, Carolyn Cissna, will back to my sister Peggy all the clothes I have borrowed from her.

I, Judy Demos, will my name "Fatty" to my sister Jane, who, I know, will live up to it as well as I have.

I, Kathie Dethero, will my ability to be a bad luck penny on a horrible rainy Friday night to anyone and everyone who has never had car trouble in awful weather.

I, Catherine Duff, will my "faux pas" to Taylor Manson. She never makes any.

I, Dani Dunkerley, will my patience to those who are not interested in the reading of the class will.

I, Hilda Gaston, will my keen sight into and overwhelming love for higher mathematics to Carla Armstrong; the poor child can't even add.

I, Barbara Johnson, will my Friday nights at home to Susan Yates, and Judy Kendall, poor things. They don't know what it's like.

I, Julie Johnson, will my ability to lose weight and stay skinny to my younger sister Sally who is so fat that she seems to float around school.

I, Evelyn Kennedy, will my ability to day-dream in class to Carolyn Drake and Peggy Rawlings, who, poor girls, don't know what being snowed is.

I, Kitty Kirby, will my car to Nancy Trotter, in hopes that the poor girl will enjoy driving a good car for a change.

I, Ann Kosik, will all my third-place swimming trophies to Charlene Cook, who doesn't have any of her own.

We, Libby Landry and Louise Newell, will our "No Parking" signs back to the Police Department of Lookout Mountain.

I, Hildred Levi, will my 4' 11" stature to Anna Beth Storey, hoping that she can do better than I did and reach 5' by the time she is a Senior.

I, Judy McCall, will myself to Snow White so that she may have 8 little dwarfs who whistle while they work.

I, Mary McCall, will my stately sophistication to Betsy Cotter and Donna Trail so that next year people will be able to tell them from their rats.

I, Eleanor McCallie, wish I could will to my cousin Helen another last name. With the present one, Baylor boys won't speak to me and McCallie boys are afraid to speak to me.

We, Marsha Goree and Ann Robinsan, will our seeing eye dogs and Braille text books to all those anonymous souls who won't wear their glasses, in hopes that they might not spend the rest of their years at GPS in total darkness.

I, Dede Groves, will my constant steady dating with one boy to Nancy Trotter, who never had a date with the same boy twice.

I, Johanna Harrison, will my ability to become involved in extraordinary predicaments to Betsy Dwyer, my faithful follower, whom I always seem to lead astray.

I, Mary Jo Hixon, will my ability to remain neutral during an argument to Sharon Mills, who is always taking sides.

I, Lynn Hodge, will to the notorious carpool my little red Corvair, in hopes that they accumulate fewer dented fenders, flat tires, and smashed doors than I have.

We, first cousins, Kitty Hon and Carolyn Poynton, will our extraordinary ability to remain compatible after six long years of living next door to each other, riding in the same carpool, studying in the same school, being in the same grade, and being in the same classes year after year to any other cousins in the same predicament.

I, Alice Huskey, will to all future Annual Board members the ability to sell their own shoes at the sweater auction.

We, Janie McFadden, Anna Reynolds, and

Cheryl Roy, will our Friday Study Halls for not having our will in on time to Sharon Mills, who always gets her work in promptly.

I, Kit Martin, will my switchblade elbows to all the gangs in New York City.

I, Beth Milligan, will my basketball shoes to Mrs. Clark so that she won't have to borrow any for next year's Antic Bowl.

I, Trudy Moss, will the use of my teeth to anyone in the school who needs a spare set, provided she makes the constant trips to the dentist and goes through all the trouble I have gone through with my teeth.

I, Cherie Muerth, will a frustrated picture editor to the incoming Junior class in hopes that she, too, will find it easy this summer to call them long distance at camp and give them picture appointments.

We, Fain Murphey and Patti Tessmann, will our unexplosive friendship to Miss Moore and Miss Moyer in hopes that they will no longer slam doors in each other's faces.

I, Pat Nelson, will my prescription sun glasses to all those as blind as I who also lose their contact lenses in their champagne.

I, Susan Robinson, will my glorious year-round tan to Ann Butterfield who takes milk water baths to stay fair.

I, Joan Salyer, will my nickname, "Boom-Boom," back to the natives in Africa.

I, Susan Sawrie, am very sorry because I cannot think of a will.

I, Charlotte Smith, will my soft, sweet, gently soothing voice to Judy Daughtery so that maybe next year she will be able to control her outrageous outbursts in Spanish class.

I, Ginger Smith, will my organization and photographic memory to . . . oh . . . what's her name?

I, Harriet Smith, will all my cake recipes to anyone who is willing to chance it.

I, Pat Spicer, will my uncontrollable desire for wool slacks, wool shirts, and tremendous, bulky-knit sweaters to Carole Greene, provided she can perform my famous "scratch dance" in 4/4 time without stopping.

I, Linda Talley, will my love for McCallie to any "True Blue" who lives a block from Baylor and can't stand it.

I, Jean Taylor, will to the remaining Signal Mountain girls the privilege of honking at the Baylor bus every morning.

I, Linda Thompson, do will my good times at the beach to Mary Wright, who never knows how to have any fun.

I, Roz Ulin, will my effervescing, sometimes over-exuberant personality to Betsy Bellah—laconic creature that she is!

I, Lucy Von Canon, will my ability to drive a car to Bette McGee and Carolyn Reavis.

I, Helen Walker, will my one contact lens to poor little Debbie Ryan who also can afford only one.

I, Jane Wyatt, will the many miles between home and school to Standard Oil and Bell Telephone, who have reaped enormous porfits because of the distance from the outer regions of suburbia to the heart of the big city.

Class Prophecy
